

I have 4 sibling and I love them all dearly and would do anything for them, but I have two that have had some crazy things happen on the farm, which is not unusual. As an example, my brother Harvey thought he would be ahead of the game by starting the car parked in the yard to let it warm up. Well, the car was on a decline, and oops he left it in neutral without the parking brake being on. And what happened, of course the car started rolling slowly down the decline just missing a power pole and started picking up speed. It then appeared as if it had a mission to park in the garage, so it headed directly for the single garage door and as it got closer, I thought this is going to be bad and depending on the damage someone might be in big trouble. Why did I think that, because the garage door was closed, temporarily until the car smashed through the garage door and into the back of the garage, it was bad, and funny as hell! mk
